Strassburger, of Norristown, Pa., who was recently appointed by President Taft as secretary of the legation and Consul General to Roumania, Bulgaria, and Servia, will sail Wednesday on the Maureiania to assume his duties. To this end Gov. Johnson, the Vice Presidential candidate, came out with the definite announcement to-day that he would not go back to Californis to save his job—which is in peril because Under cover of darkness, the main force of the Bulgarian army is creeping along between banks of Martins, within forty kilometers of Adrianople. They are accompanied by a considerable force of Servians. Another large detachment of Serbs is at Kumanova and still another force is marching on Pristina to make a final assult. They are reported making good headway. The Turks have been forced back toward the city during the day but managed to inflict heavy losses on the Serbs by leaving mines in their wake.

The right wing of the Bulgarian army iste to-day occupied the heights commanding the valley of Arda.

London. Oct. 20.—News of the advance of the Bulgarian and Servian armies on Adrinople is confirmed in news dispatches received here to-night. Military experts express surprise that the allied armies have been able to meet and overcome the Turkish outposts in so short a time.

The colonel will, after an enforced rest at Oyster Bay, begin preparations for his last speech of the campaign, to be delivered at Madison Square Garden, New York, on the evening of October 28.

Whether his condition will allow him to speak for thirty minutes or for only five minutes, he says that it will be a final message to the people of the country to deliver themselves from the present political system.

"In this speech, whether it be short or long, it will embrace the most important issues of the campaign," said Mr. McGrath, Col. Roosevelt's secretary.

is some speculation and interest as to just what will come of it all. Originally the investigation, which was authorized under a resolution passed through the Senate at the instance of Senator Culberson of Texas, comprehended only an investigation into the campaign funds of the two Presidential campaigns of 1904 and 1908. It was not until after Hearst's Magazine printed the letter from John D. Archboid to Senator Penrose inclosing a check for $5,000, and the Pennsylvania Senator made it a matter of personal privilege on the floor of the Senate, that the investigation took on a broader scope. As amended by the La Pollette-Panrose resolution, passed in the closing days of the session, it authorized the committee to investigate Congress campaign funds, the Penrose matter, as well as correspondence generally that had passed between John D. Archboid and Senators and Members of Congress and the political relations of Col. Roosevelt to George W. Perkins.

What will the committee find? That is the question uppermost in the mind of politicians. Will it condemn Col Roosevelt? The attitude of at least three members of the committee—two Democrats and one Republican—suggests that the colonel will come in for criticism. The committee may find, and will probably find, that he is to be condemned for making no effort to investigate and salisfy himself that the Standard Oil made no contribution in 1906 before publicly denying it.

The committee will not be unanimous in its report if it takes a decided stand on any phase of the hearings. Sensior Claps, the chairman, will not quberflie to any report condemning or criticians to any report condemning or criticians Co. Roosevelt. This suggests the strong probability of a divided report. One member of the committee intimated that he saw no reason for any elaborate report, as the investigation grew but of he saw no reason for any elaborate re-port, as the investigation grew but of the heat and fervor of the campaign, and was prompted largely by a popular de-sire to peep into Col.
